DECORATION FOR A LUNCHEON

Big Central Basket or Birch Bark Filled With Flowers Makes Charming Touch.

A charming decoration for a luncheon is a big central basket or birch bark filled with white lilies, white phlox and white garden roses. The broad lily leaves fall over the edge of the basket on to the cloth to form a deep green border.

At the four corners have tall glass or silver vases filled with lilies—with same drooping border of leaves—and pink snapdragon. The cakes and bonbons can be white and pink. At one luncheon the candies were tiny calla lilies in the natural coloring.

Serve the desert in tall sherbet glasses with the stems twined with vines and a border of the flowers around edge of the plate. One plate can have a wreath of the white roses and phlox, another of the pink snapdragon, and thus alternate around the table.

An unusual touch is to serve the ices in the heart of the calla lilies—the stem set in a small flask twined with vines and on one side of the plate have a bouquet of the flowers used in the decorations, alternating the white flowers with one of pink snapdragon.

TWEED COSTUME.

This costume, although quite simple, is very smartly cut. The skirt has a panel front continued round the foot at sides and back; this is laid on with a wide wrapped seam.

FIXING THE TOILET TABLE

Good Way to Bring Various Articles Into Harmony With Surroundings.

Often on a fastidiously decked dressing table the only article which is unattractive in appearance is the hair brush with a plain wooden back. Many women find that the usual silver-backed brush is too soft bristled and habitually use a plain, inexpensive one because it is stiffer.

A good way to bring them into harmony with the surroundings is to cover the backs of such brushes with brocade or broche silk.

Sandpaper the wood so that it will hold gum or paste. Have the silk cut the exact size and shape of the brush's back and paste it on very smoothly. Finish the edge, after the silk is dry, with a narrow border of gilt or galoon.

Flowered silk to match the other toilet belongings has the prettiest effect.

A brush treated in this way makes an attractive gift. Cretone and small figured chintz may take the place of silk. If they are used elsewhere in the bedroom furnishings.

Linen or plain silk with the monogram of the owner embroidered on it may also be used for these covers.

Choosing Dentifrices.

Delicate lips are liable to be irritated by a tooth powder or mouth wash, not because the powder or wash is too strong, but because the lips and skin around are so unusually delicate that they are irritated by powders and washes that are well borne by those with less delicate skins.

This is an additional reason for having tooth powders and mouth washes specially prepared, so that the nature and proportions of the ingredients are known. When this is done, a dentist or doctor, if anything has caused the irritation, can reduce the amount or remove any ingredient that is capable of irritating even the most delicate lips.

Matched Sets.

Hats, bags, muffs and wraps in matched sets are made of all sorts of effective materials. One was of black velvet embroidered in Bulgarian colors. The bags are big and have long cords by which to hang them from the shoulders, but this style of bag is, in spite of its long cord, usually carried over the wrist or in the hand.

HON. WALTER E. DANIEL.

Something of One of the State's Best Men Who is a Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

(By D. P. Waters.)

Walter E. Daniel, son of Rufus W. and Narcissa (Allen) Daniel, was born in Weldon, Halifax County, N. C., August 14, 1859. He was educated at Wake Forest College, where he made such rapid progress in his studies that he completed the prescribed course of work and examinations a year earlier than the general run of students, graduating in 1878 and receiving the degree of Master of Arts. He then began the study of law in the office of W. H. Day at Weldon, and continued his studies at the law school in Raleigh conducted by Judge George V. Strong. After passing a successful examination his youth delayed his admission to the Bar until he reached the age of twenty-one years. He was then regularly admitted, and began practice at Weldon in January, 1881. His progress was marked by unusual ability in handling the cases of his clients, and after a few years of active experience he became solicitor for the inferior court of Halifax County. After serving in this capacity four years his work proved so satisfactory that he was elected solicitor for the Second Judicial district and performed the duties of that office with distinguished ability for three years. He served in the Senate during the session of 1907, doing important work as chairman of the Judiciary Committee and as a member of the Committee on Appropriations and Committee on Rules. Mr. Daniel has always displayed an active interest in educational affairs, being at present a member of the Boards of Trustees of the A. and M. College, Wake Forest College, Littleton Female College and is chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Weldon graded school.

Mr. Daniel has been no less a success in business than in his professional career. He was one of the organizers of the Bank of Weldon in 1892 and has been president of that institution since its organization. He is also a stockholder and director in two cotton mills at Weldon. The various interests with which he is connected, in addition to an extensive law practice, demand energetic effort combined with business and professional ability of a high order. Mr. Daniel is fortunate in the possession of the requirements necessary for social and material advancement. He is naturally optimistic. His views of life and its vicissitudes are broad and humane, his public spirit active, progressive and generous, and his principles, as applied to government are soundly democratic.

Such, in brief, is the character in outline of the man who is now a candidate for the office of Lieutenant-Governor of North Carolina; and without reserve it is freely admitted by all who know him that his qualifications in every respect are admirably balanced to maintain with dignity and efficiency the responsibilities of that high office.

Mr. Daniel's home life reflects hospitality and domestic tranquility, his family consisting of his charming wife and eight children. Mrs. Daniel was Miss Jeanette Snead, a daughter of Captain Charles G. Snead both natives of Fluvanna County, Va.
